Bronco Charlie Miller's log cabin still stands today in Oakdale on Montauk Highway. Look closely at what is now Bronco Charlie's well-known restaurant, now owned by Ralph Schobitz, and the original building is easily recognized, though it has been builtonto through the years since becoming a restaurant. That is Bronco Charlie himself in the picture, taken somewhere in the 1920's. He carved wooden figures and had a curio shop here. There doesn't seem to be any word on why he came east to Long Island after riding the Pony Express at age eleven, losing his parents to Indians, tangling with the Nez Perce Indians, knowing Buffalo Bill and Jesse James. As an elderly man he returned west by horseback, then came east again for a visit in 1950 at age 101. He died when 105. The sign beneath the carved wooden eagle in picture reads, "Our Acres."
